camp  quality.

laughter is the best medicine.

On a quiet Tuesday afternoon in Paynes Find, we saw a truck with containers arrive. This truck, however, was full of swags, suitcases, bags and equipment as the WesCarpade arrived in town for the night. One truck, 18 extremely well decorated cars, support vehicles and 71 very special people started pouring into town for what would prove to be a big night for all.

A big thank you to Lisa, Doug and the team at the Roadhouse for making this event possible and to see it all come together for the Children and their Families.

Thank you again Lisa, Doug & family, Dave, Gail, Rachel, Cowboy, Lisette, Talia, Suzie & Russell for their donations in all shapes and forms. These items all created a big night of crazy auctions and ongoing entertainment.

All of this put together with the great team of people from WesCarpade has again continued to raise much needed $$$$$$$$$$ to continue with support, and to help improve the lives of families dealing with Cancer.

UPDATES

Hello everyone,

Acting Sergeant Revis RYDER here from the Yalgoo Police Station.

Firstly I just want to let you know that a new Officer In charge of the Yalgoo Police Station has been selected and he should be here in about 5-6 weeks time.

Myself and 1/c Comeagain are looking forward to his arrival, as 3 officers in Yalgoo would enable us to provide a better service to the community.

Several crime incidents have occurred in recent weeks in Yalgoo some have been resolved and others have ongoing inquiries.

Football news from the weekend Saturday/Sunday 31st August & 2nd September 2013.

The Mullewa league side suffered a loss in the 2nd semi final against Brigades. So we now have to play in the Preliminary final this weekend against Towns for the right to play Brigades in the Grand Final.

The Mullewa Reserves had a big win against Railways, so the Reserves will play in the Grand Final in 2 weeks time on the 15th of September 2013.

The Mullewa Colts team had a win on Sunday against Towns and will have to defeat Railways this weekend for the right to meet Brigades in the Grand Final in 2 weeks time as well.

That's all we have to report on from the staff at Yalgoo Police Station.

Cheers.

NATIONAL WILD DOG ACTION PLAN

60 Day Public Consultation Phase initiated

In February 2013, WoolProducers Australia (WPA) brought together critical industry stakeholders to develop a national action plan to combat the economic and personal devastation caused by wild dogs across rural Australia.

The goal when initiating this work was to harness all the excellent work being undertaken to manage wild dogs from around the country and to use this to facilitate a nationally coordinated approach.

The draft plan covers a multi-faceted approach, which includes leadership, people and capacity building, tools and methodologies as well as monitoring, evaluation and reporting for continuous improvement.

On behalf of the Project Steering Committee (PSC), WoolProducers Australia (WPA) is pleased to advise you the National Wild Dog Action Plan Exposure Draft has now been released for a 60 day public consultation period.

The PSC is now seeking public feedback regarding the suitability of the Plan Exposure Draft before progressing to the final project review stage.

Feedback is sought from private and public landholders, commonwealth and state/territory governments and their agencies, industry bodies, research institutes, conservation groups and community members.

Feedback process

The Exposure Draft materials can be downloaded from WPA's website:

<http://www.woolproducers.com.au/national-wild-dogs-action-plan/>

Feedback will be accepted up to the Close of Business on Friday 25th October 2013.

Feedback and all inquiries should be directed to:

Ingredients

- ❑ 1 red onion
- ❑ 1 red capsicum
- ❑ 1 dried chorizo sausage (see top tips)
- ❑ 3 lamb sausages
- ❑ 1 tbs olive oil, plus extra, to drizzle
- ❑ 2 x 400g cans Italian chopped tomatoes
- ❑ 4 eggs

Preheat oven to 180C. Peel, halve, then slice onion. Halve capsicum, discard seeds, then thinly slice. Thinly slice chorizo. Squeeze meat from sausage casings into 2cm pieces.

Step 2

Heat oil in a frying pan over medium heat. Add chorizo and cook, turning, for 3 minutes or until browned. Using a slotted spoon, transfer to a plate lined with paper towel. Add sausage pieces to pan and cook, turning, for 3 minutes or until browned. Using a slotted spoon, add to chorizo. Reserve pan.

Annie's Wedding

Annie systematically packing eggs, holds her engagement ring up, smiles soon she'll leave this place. Annie's fiancé has a small farm, the hen run free, she hates the battery farm she works on and has since her mother forced her out to work at fifteen.

Her father was injured on a fishing boat, not that he was a fisherman, he was a writer and not a very good one either. Her mother said he was special, but to Annie he was cruel, never noticed her at all, unless she was under his feet, then he'd just yell.

Annie's dad never made any money out of his writing, he was a good-looking charmer, but lazy as the can be. Annie's poor mum worked in the local factory to make any money and there was only one child.

The reason Annie's mum Robin mad her go to work was to make more money for her father to get drunk and be a gentleman. He had fallen from grace, his family being wealthy (but not senseless), had kicked him out, yet Annie's mum loved him and the ways of love being strange, she'd support him through anything and kick her child out to keep him.

So Annie smiles as she looks at her ring, Jessie is her man and she's to marry him on Saturday. She's so happy that she has her fingers crossed, so many things could go wrong.

Today is Wednesday, soon it will be three-thirty, shift-change, Annie will go home, to cook and clean the small apartment that she shares with her mum Robin and dad Alex. She'll have tea ready at four-thirty dad's is usually left in the oven until he staggers home from the pub at sometime between twelve and one am.

Alex is a great philosopher over a few pints and ports at the local. If his had a good night with a good audience he sings as he climbs the stairs to bed and passed out. If, as more often is the case, someone had dared to argue with him, he kicks the door, bounces of the walls and screams at her mum.

Tonight is the former, which means Robin will be smiling in the morning and Annie can go to work happy. "Hopefully," thinks Annie " he'll stay that way until I'm married. I do know he likes Jessie, even though he's not the same."

Jessie meanwhile hums to himself whilst he's working on the farm, he cannot wait until he's married to his Annie, he thinks so much of her.

Poems and Stories by M. Pauline Davies

Even when Tulip, the old cow he only kept because she was his mother's favourite, tries to run into the paddock, where his prize Hereford bull (Harry) is, he still has patience. Jessie used to have a bad temper but has learnt to control it over the years. On a farm nothing ever goes according to plan, patience is a learnt experience.

As Jessie is humming away to himself, a black ute turns into the farm driveway and out jumps his nephew John, who is thirteen, with his sister Joan and her husband Andy. Joan goes straight to the house as John and Andy go out to the fields looking for Jessie.

They've come down from Lytham as they run a boarding house there. Annie lives in Bolton and Jessie's farm is in Wray. Jessie and Joan's parents own a hardware shop in Garstang and have lived there for fifty years. They're due to come down the next day.

"Uncle Jessie," shouted John "where are you" as he ran into the lower paddock, " here, where did you spring from" replied Jessie as he ran to hug his only nephew. "Look a tulip, she's really after Harry hey," said John "why don't you let her play." Well, she's just not the right breed," said Jessie, " if i had a murray grey bull instead of a Hereford it would work."

Dose that make a difference then" said young John "Yes, there are only certain breeds that you can intermingle because of their bloodlines." "oh, ok, hey day" Andy walks up.

He'd been enjoying the stroll after his busy life at the boarding house. "hi Jessie, how's it going, coming home for a beer" asked Andy, "yeah, just about finished her." the tree of them walks back to the house.

The days go by, Jessie and Annie have so much to do that before they realize its Saturday morning. Jessie and Joan's parents are here and everyone is gathering in the church.

Alex has stayed sober for once and is waiting for the bride to come down the stairs. Annie and her mother robin had skilfully concealed her dress and when his daughter walked down the stairs to the entrance of the flat, where Alex was waiting he gasped, " You look beautiful" before he could help himself.

It had been so long since her dad had noticed her that Annie was dumbstruck. "i must look pretty good then" she tucked that thought away and smiled.

They got into the horse and carriage that Jessie had arranged and set off on Annie's great adventure, Annie's wedding day.

Regional athletes and clubs win from funding programs

- Grants up to $1000 made available for regional athletes aged 13 to 21 to assist with travel costs
- Regional sporting clubs can apply for $500 grants to invest in shared sporting equipment.

Young regional athletes and regional sporting clubs in North West Central will benefit from $2 million in Royalties for Regions funding created by the State Government.

The funding provides $1 million through a Junior Representative Travel Assistance Program to support talented athletes and an additional $1 million for better equipping sports clubs through a Community Sport Equipment Grant.

Vince Catania Member for North West Central said the funding was an election commitment from The Nationals and would be delivered over the next four years.

"The Nationals understand sport plays an important role in regional communities, keeping people fit and healthy as well as facilitating inclusion and community interaction," Vince said.

"I am delighted that up and coming regional athletes in North West Central will be eligible for financial support of up to $1000 to help them travel for regional, state or national representation.

"Providing direct assistance through one-off grants of up to $500 for sporting clubs to help with the cost of much-needed equipment is also a huge bonus."

Royalties for Regions will provide $500,000 each year to get the programs underway.

The new programs will complement existing programs such as the Country Athlete Scholarships program to support the development of regional athletes.

"Regional WA has produced many world-class athletes and through this Royalties for Regions initiative it is bound to produce many more in the future," Vince said.

Liberal for Durack

An important note about the Federal Election

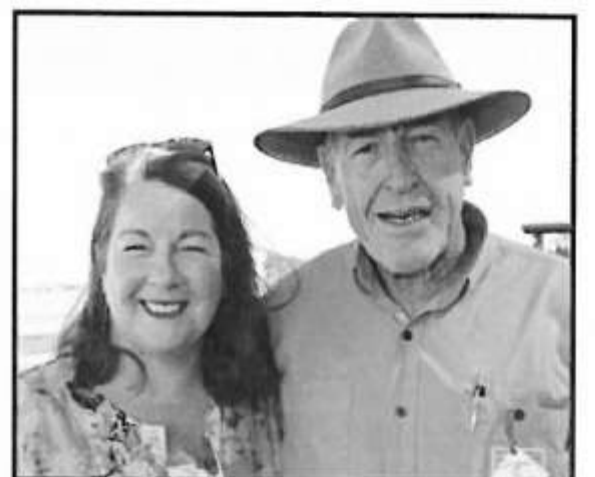

The outcome of this election is important for you and your family.

If you elect me I will have direct access to the Prime Minister, Treasurer and other Liberal Ministers so we can get a fair share for regional WA.

By voting Liberal you will also get rid of this chaotic Government, the carbon tax, the mining tax, and help fix the budget. And only the Liberals will stop the boats.

When you vote Liberal you'll be standing up for Western Australia and getting a stronger and united Government team for a stronger Australia.

Royalties for Regions Boost to Attract and Retain Regional Police Officers

Member for North West Central, Vince Catania MLA, has welcomed the State Government's commitment of more than $10 million from Royalties for Regions toward attracting WA police officers to live and work in regional areas.

Royalties for Regions will provide $10.5 million for the regional incentive scheme, aiming to attract and retain police officers in regional and remote communities around the state.

The incentive scheme comes on top of $1.2 billion in funding set aside for WA Police in 2013-14 with a $56.4 million increase in police spending on the last financial year.

Funding would help maintain and increase police presence in the regions and benefit community safety.

"Police take on one of the most important and overlooked responsibilities of any profession, at times putting their own lives at risk in the line of duty to ensure the safety of our communities, Vince said. Funding would help maintain and increase police presence in the regions and benefit community safety".

"With the added challenge of living and working in regional areas, the State Government's commitment to providing extra incentives to attract and retain police officers at hard-to-fill postings is welcome."

In 2011-12 there were more than 1300 police officers and 122 police staff, known as auxiliary officers, stationed in regional WA at 123 police stations.

"Initial attraction payments will be made and a further payment in recognition of more than three-and-a-half years' service, back dated to July 1 this year, has been committed by the Police Minister and Minister for Regional Development," Vince said.

"I'm sure the community will join me in welcoming police officers willing to relocate to North West Central Region and pursue a career, live and help create a safer environment for our residents and visitors."

As a local government councillor you can influence decisions about your community in:

- Sport and Recreation
- Environment
- Community Development
- Public Health and Safety
- Essential Infrastructure
- Future Planning

The best way to influence change is to be involved in the decision-making process.

Councillors play a very important community leadership role and influence the decisions that Councils make about what happens locally.

Local government councillors are elected by people who live and do business in the local Council area.

Aboriginal people have strong historical and cultural ties to their communities and the land. With this knowledge, they can help to develop policies and make decisions on what is the best way to strengthen communities and look after the land.

A Councillor gets involved in:

- determining local government policies
- developing and monitoring strategic plans and budgets
- making sure the Council's resources are used fairly for the benefit of all community members and
- overseeing the allocation of the local government's finances and resources.

The best way to influence change is to be part of the decision-making process. A term on Council is one way you can make sure that Aboriginal Perspectives are heard and considered by a local government. It's your community and it's your local government. Be part of both.

A Big Decision, but really worth it!

Taking on a community leadership role means taking on extra work. So becoming a councillor is a big decision. There are demands on your time to read local government documents, attend monthly council meetings as well as attend additional meetings and community functions. You may have to travel, speak publicly and make decisions that are for the good of everyone in your local community.

Many councillors also represent local government on other boards and committees to make sure that they remain aware of community needs and goals.

You will also receive training in a number of areas on being a Councillor.

It's about balancing responsibilities, obligations and commitments. But for the extra work there are many rewards for being on council.

Once you are elected as a Councillor your role will involve:

- presenting your arguments and debating with other councillors
- reading and understanding reports, plans, policies including budgets, strategic plans and local laws
- public speaking at community events and being in the public eye
- dealing with issues that sometimes may not seem important to you or Aboriginal people

- experiencing expectations from within the Council and community on Aboriginal issues. It is the job of all Councillors to represent everyone in their communities, not just Aboriginal people, as at times Aboriginal people think you just represent them.
- dealing with the reality about what issues you can influence and what you can actually achieve and act on as a councillor.

Who can nominate as a candidate?

Local Government Elections are held every 2 years to elect councillors for terms of 4 years. People can nominate to become a candidate, if they are:

- 18 or older
- entitled to vote
- a resident or rate payer of the council area, or an occupier of rateable land in the area

However, some people may be ineligible and therefore cannot be a candidate if:

- they are already an elected member of State or Federal Parliament
- they have been bankrupt
- they are in prison
- they have been convicted of a serious local government offence within the past five years
- they have been convicted on indictment of an offence for which the indictable penalty was or included imprisonment for life, or imprisonment for more than 5 years
- they are a member of another local government council.

Checklist – What your nomination must include:

- Fill out a nomination form
- Attach a candidate profile
- Pay a $80 deposit
- Sign an authorisation form

Nominations Open Thursday, 5 September 2013

Nominations Close 4:00pm Thursday, 12 September 2013

If there are the same number of positions as candidates nominated, you will automatically be appointed as a councillor. If not you will have to think about winning a position on council. You do this by campaigning.

Assess your chance of winning

- Get to know the local area and issues really well. (Your local council office should be able to provide maps and information on population trends).
- Attend some council meetings and get an idea of the meeting processes and issues discussed.
- Work out your campaign theme. The theme needs to reflect what the voters want to hear based on community issues. The community will want to know what you stand for so they can decide on whether to vote for you.
- You will need to plan and market your campaign and promote yourself.
- You will need to develop a profile and be seen. This can be involvement in community groups and organisations, listening to community and individual concerns.
- Encourage Aboriginal people to enrol and vote for you. Let them know why their vote is important.
- Work out who can help promote you as a candidate. You can consider publishing brochures, door knocking, meeting and yarning with people at a local gathering place. There may be local media opportunities.

Perenjori community to celebrate at open day and blues concert

Community, commercial and private conservation interests have joined forces to present a unique celebration at the Open Day and Blues for the Bush concert to be held at the Charles Darwin Reserve on 5 October 2013.

The 68,600 hectare former pastoral station, 60 kilometres east of Perenjori, was acquired by Bush Heritage Australia in 2003 and renamed the Charles Darwin Reserve. The 10th anniversary of the acquisition will be celebrated with a community open day that has attracted the support and active participation of the Shire of Perenjori and sponsorship funding from local and regional businesses.

The program includes cooking demonstrations, children's activities ranging from mural-painting to kite flying, a series of thought-provoking speakers on the challenges of managing land for food production, tours of the Reserve conducted by conservation scientists as well as a series of talks lead by former ABC journalist and oral historian Bill Bunbury about some of the people who have called the Perenjori region home.

Commenting on the open day program Shire of Perenjori CEO Ali Mills said it represented an outstanding opportunity for the community to celebrate its resilience and diversity as well as showcase Perenjori as a place to live work and invest in.

"The landscape will be ablaze with wildflowers, the open day program offers something for everyone and the Blues for the Bush concert gives city and country folk a chance to meet and celebrate together. We invite everybody to come along to what promises to be one of the best parties Perenjori has ever had" Ms Ali Mills said.

Open day events and activities will be free and followed by a ticketed, open-air Blues for the Bush concert featuring an impressive line-up of local, Perth and interstate musicians. Tickets for the concert include a spit-roast meal and cost $45 for adults and $15 for children. The venue will be licensed and overnight camping facilities are available. Tickets can be purchased on-line from www.bushfortheblues.org.au

According to Luke Bayley the Manager of the Charles Darwin Reserve the involvement of Bush Heritage in the Open Day and Blues for the Bush concert reflected a growing recognition that conservation organisations needed to engage better with the communities within which they operated.

“We want everybody to better understand what we are doing to protect this very unique part of the Australian bush and to extend our influence and concern for the environment beyond the boundaries of our own Reserve. I can think of few better ways to do this than when sitting under the stars listening to good music” Luke Bayley said.

Details of the Open Day program and the line-up for the Blues for the Bush concert are now available on the event website at www.bluesforthebush.org.au .Regular updates will be posted as the program details are finalised.
